

Missiles Won't Replace Men, Sergeant Says

Technical Sergeant Duane K. Hetter, recruiting sergeant for the Torrance area with his office at 1319 1/2 Sartori Ave., has this to say about missiles or manned aircraft.

"Despite the confusion which is current concerning the use of missiles or manned aircraft, one point is apparent. The United States today, and through the coming years is depending upon, and will continue to depend upon the manned ships of the United States Air Force."

Sergeant Hetter dispelled completely the thought that manned aircraft are slated for early entry into the scrap heap.

"Today, as never before," he said, "the most important component in the modern aircraft is man. And, the Air Force is constantly looking for men who have the desire but lack the 'know-how' to fly. That's where we come in. The U. S. Air Force offers the finest and most complete flying training course a qualified applicant can get anywhere, and, qualified applicants who have been accepted, are able to enter training from four to six weeks after acceptance."

High School graduates who can qualify are eligible to enter the Aviation Cadet program. All men between the ages of 19 and 26 1/2 are urged to contact Sergeant Hetter at the Torrance recruiting office.
